Barry Etra, Atl Prez: still no audio!

Angie Atkins: As a participant you are also welcome and encouraged to visit our Torah of Leadership's Beit Midrash! In the Beit Midrash you'll find – and can share – links to great sources relevant to the class and can continue your comments and thinking with one another in between sessions. Angie Atkins: Want to dedicate my learning also to the memory and honor of those murdered in Pittsburgh 3 years ago yesterday. May their memories be a blessing.

Shelly Kupfer: intense conversation

Susie Sorkin: Lots of love

Reisa's iPhone: Much love between the kids and sadness

Alicia Chandler (she/her): Bonded children

Orli Garti Seroussi: Hagar's hand on Sara

Judy Oberlander: two conversations at once

Wendy Kesser: Braided arms

Alicia Chandler (she/her): A mother's physical attachment to her child

Angie Atkins: @Alicia — love that observation

judy neuman: I see trust.

Vanessa Ressler: They clearly went a good distance from others to talk

Ariel Nelson: Yishmael has a furrowed brow

Susie Sorkin: @ariel I see that too and I see him as protective of Isaac

Alicia Chandler (she/her): They are all very white in this picture.

Barry Etra, Atl Prez: How can I get a copy of this slide?

Yael Bendat-Appell: There is a particularly strong resemblance between Ishmael and Hagar. (Their faces)

Sue BermanKress - Pittsburgh: BTW, if her child is 17 why isn't she collaborating with HIM to find a solution?

CHarris: Hagar doesn't believe in Abraham's promise to her and doesn't believe in her own personal strength

Lisa Lisser: And she's been here before, and the well was there then

Shelly Kupfer: Yes Sue!! I was thinking that too—better open communication needed!

Lisa Lisser: And it's god's promise to her, not avrahams
